GEN 2019ABF Introduction to South China Studies 華南研究概論

Credit-units:	3
Level:	2000
Medium of Instruction:	Bilingual
Offering School:	School of Arts and Social Sciences

This course aims to provide a comprehensive understanding of the history and development of South China studies, focusing on the core questions: Under the unity of Chinese culture, why and how does internal social differentiation occur? In terms of analytical tools and methodology, South China studies are influenced by the discipline of anthropology and history. In terms of sources, greater emphasis is placed on field investigations and the exploration and utilization of local documents. In terms of research trends, although South China studies initially focused on the southern regions of Fujian and Guangdong, they have now transcended regional boundaries and moved towards larger-scale regional comparisons.

Note: The School of Arts and Social Sciences will be named “Wu Jieh Yee School of Arts and Social Sciences (伍潔宜人文社會科學院) effective from 1 September 2026.

Therefore, the course content is divided into three parts: the first part begins with concepts, understanding the focus of South China studies and research methodologies. The second part focuses on the “South China,” exploring its local customs and sentiments. The third part moves beyond “South China” to understand cross-regional historical anthropological research.

本科旨在提綱挈領地了解華南研究的歷史與進展，了解華南研究的核心問題：在中國文化的統一性之下，其內部社會運作為何與如何會出現分殊性？在研究的概念與脈絡上，華南研究受到人類學與歷史學的影響。在研究素材方面，則更重視實地田野考察與對地方文獻的發掘與運用。在研究趨向上，華南研究雖始於南方的閩、粵地區，但現今已跳脫出地域的邊界，朝向更大規模的區域比較。因此，本課程內容共分為三部分：第一部分從概念開始，了解華南研究所關注的內容，以及研究的方法論。第二部分集中在「華南」地區，探討當中的鄉土人情。第三部分則跳脫出「華南」，了解跨地域的歷史人類學研究。

GEN 2003ABF Science Fiction Films 科幻電影

Credit-units:	3
Level:	2000
Medium of instruction:	Bilingual
Offering School:	School of Arts and Social Sciences

This course aims to offer visions and treatments of the future through studying the great visionary film masters and their sci-fi films and animations about the future. Looking to “the future” is one way to meet our curiosity with questions and answers about the past and present. This course is not just about the future but also about the present conditions of our civilization through films about the future. As French philosopher Simone Weil puts it: “The future is made of the same stuff as the present.” From Melies’ 1902 “Trip to the Moon” to Kubrick’s 2001 “Space Odyssey”, in which human has finally broken the speed of light barrier, this course covers the important science fiction films and offers a deep and reflective exploration of human issues, social conditions and technological development through these films about the future.

"We all want to escape occasionally. But science fiction is often very far from escapism, in fact you might say that science fiction is escape into reality... It's a fiction which does concern itself with real issues: the origin of man; our future. In fact I can't think of any form of literature which is more concerned with real issues, reality." - Arthur C Clarke

This course re-examines the developing historical timeline of human issues and also offers an

Note: The School of Arts and Social Sciences will be named “Wu Jieh Yee School of Arts and Social Sciences (伍潔宜人文社會科學院) effective from 1 September 2026.

Medium of Instruction:	English
Offering School:	School of Education and Languages
Excluded Combination:	(i) GEN 2045ECF (ii) EDU 1150EEF (iii) EDU 1150ECF

This course introduces students to the fundamental concepts of Artificial Intelligence (AI) and its transformative applications in contemporary learning and teaching contexts. Students will develop essential AI literacy by gaining a solid understanding of AI's capabilities, limitations, and evolution.

A key emphasis of the course is the cultivation of practical skills, particularly in prompt engineering and the effective use of generative AI tools to enhance personal learning and to support others as peer educators or private tutors. In addition to technical proficiency, students will critically examine the ethical, social, and privacy implications of AI, including issues related to academic integrity, data protection, and responsible content generation, to develop the ability to apply AI tools purposefully in pedagogical design and in learner-centred applications to support effective learning.

Through a blend of theoretical frameworks and hands-on activities, the course guides students in designing and evaluating AI-enhanced strategies such as personalized adaptive learning and multimedia resource creation. By applying their knowledge to real-world educational challenges, students will strengthen their autonomy, creativity, and critical reflection as they navigate the opportunities and complexities of intelligent technologies.

English Language Studies & Literature

GEN 1003ABF Language, Society and Culture 語言、社會與文化

Credit-units:	3
Level:	1000
Medium of Instruction:	Bilingual
Offering School:	School of Arts and Social Sciences

This course aims at enhancing students' awareness of the relationship of language, culture, and society in different societies around the world as well as in the Hong Kong society. It also provides students with an understanding of the ways in which a wide range of social and cultural factors impinge on the study and uses of language. It will thus enhance students' language and language-appreciation capabilities through a theoretical approach to the analysis of different language issues in culture and society. The course will fulfill the institutional outcome of "Adopt a global outlook and appreciate cultural diversity".

GEN 1024AEF Creative English: Hong Kong Literature and Popular Culture 創意英語：香港文學及流行文化

Credit-units:	3
Level:	1000
Medium of Instruction:	English
Offering School:	School of Arts and Social Sciences

This course aims to introduce students to creative or non-academic uses of English, with a focus on uses of English in Hong Kong literature and popular culture (e.g. pop music and film), and to involve students in close reading and creative writing.

GEN 2043EEF Creativity in Everyday English 日用英語中的創意

Credit-units:	3
Level:	2000
Medium of instruction:	English
Offering School:	School of Education and Languages

Excluded Combination: ENGL 4310EEF

This course introduces students to examples of the kinds of creativity found in everyday spoken and written English and discusses their origins and the theoretical perspectives which have been developed to account for them. Creative language use involves both playful and persuasive uses of language which perform important roles in relation to identity construction and display as well as in the management of interpersonal relations and which employ techniques similar to those employed in literary creativity. Students will be given a historical perspective on creativity as realized in the popular writing emerging in 19th century England. They will then be introduced to contemporary examples of creativity in order to identify their underlying structure and the social and interpersonal roles they play. They will then go on to explore some of the theoretical perspectives which help us to understand the structure, purpose and role of such creativity.
